David Fridman is a naturalist and recognised authority on the fauna of the Red Sea. He spent many years studying and observing life in the reefs of the Red Sea. Fridman works with many well known marine scientists and underwater photographers and is one of the founders of Coral World (underwater observatories and marine aquariums). He contributes to the knowledge of marine life and the conservation of the Coral Reefs.

Tony Malmqvist was born in Sweden in 1949. He learned to dive and started taking pictures of the underwater life of Sweden in 1967. After a diving trip to the Red Sea in 1968 he never really adjusted to life above water and has been working as a diving instructor in the Red Sea for many years. Tony's skills with camera, airbrush and watercolors have earned him recognition and several awards at international photo-shows and underwater festivals.
